

Christopher and the golf ball

There is a very small boy. His name is Christopher. Christopher likes to play golf. Monday, at six o'clock, Christopher goes to the golf course. He plays golf, but there's a problem with the ball. Christopher doesn't have a golf ball, he has a basketball! The manager of the golf course is angry and yells at Christopher. Christopher cries and walks quickly home.

Tuesday, at one-thirty, Christopher goes to the golf course. He plays golf, but there's a problem with the ball. Christopher doesn't have a golf ball, he has a baseball! The manager of the golf course is angry and yells at Christopher. Christopher cries and walks quickly home.

Wednesday, at quarter after three, Christopher goes to the golf course. He plays golf, but there's a problem with the ball. Christopher doesn't have a golf ball, he has a football! The manager of the golf course is angry and yells at Christopher. Christopher cries and goes home on his bike.

Thursday, at quarter to four, Christopher goes to the golf course. He plays golf, but there's a problem with the ball. Christopher doesn't have a golf ball, he has a bowling ball! The manager of the golf course is angry and yells at Christopher. Christopher cries and goes home on his bike.

Friday, at nine ten, Christopher goes to the golf course. He plays golf, but there's a problem with the ball. Christopher doesn't have a golf ball, he has a marble! The manager of the golf course is angry and yells at Christopher. Christopher cries and walks quickly home.

Saturday, at ten twenty, Christopher does not go to the golf course. He goes to the sports store on his bike. He buys three golf balls and goes back to his house.

Sunday, at noon, Christopher goes to the golf course. He plays golf: there isn't a problem with the ball because he has a golf ball! The manager of the golf course is not angry, he plays with Christopher. They dance!